NATIVE AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

The Native American Development Corporation is a nonprofit organization established in 1996 and located in Billings, Montana. In 2001, we became a certified Native CDFI and in 2009, launched a Native Procurement Technical Assistance Center to assist entrepreneurs in navigating government contracting opportunities. Late in 2018, the organization opened the Billings Urban Indian Health and Wellness Center to serve the American Indian population living in Yellowstone County through a range of culturally appropriate medical services. Our vision is to be a high-quality, high-performing sustainable community and economic development corporation providing the tools and resources necessary for individuals and families and businesses and communities in rural reservation and urban Native areas in Montana, Wyoming, and North and South Dakota to not just survive, but to thrive. We view this as a long-term commitment and continue to make progress towards this end by leveraging existing and new human and financial resources.

Financial and Social Impact

- 11 small business loans totaling $895,053.18
- $125,000 in total non-equity leveraged due to financing

CDFI Story – Big Sky Cafe, Browning, MT

In early 2020, we partnered with Native American Community Development Financial Services, Browning, MT, to help a Native business owner open a new restaurant. This loan was made during the Covid-19 pandemic and allowed the borrower to remodel and be well-prepared to open. This restaurant is in new Browning, MT, near the Blackfeet Reservation and is open and staying healthy.
